My experience as a former assistant prosecuting attorney and as a partner in a general practice law firm gave me a wide array of experience in both legal and practical matters. I have prosecuted cases and served as defense counsel for defendants. Litigating criminal cases from both sides has given me a unique perspective I use every day in administering a busy criminal docket. In private practice I represented a wide array of clients from individuals to corporations. This experience has given me not only the and knowledge to preside over civil cases but has also given me a firm foundation to understand the many different challenges faced by litigants, attorneys, and others as their cases proceed through the Court system. As a partner in a general practice law firm I learned firsthand the necessity to practice fiscal responsibility, make smart choices concerning limited resources, and the value of integrity and common sense in leading an organization.
