Emily Lanza

Emily Lanza is Senior Counsel for Policy & International Affairs at the U.S. Copyright Office, where her portfolio includes work on the domestic policy, trade, and international copyright developments. She earned a JD from Georgetown University Law Center, a MPhil in Archaeological Heritage from the University of Cambridge, and a BA in Anthropology from the University of Pennsylvania. Prior to her legal career, she held several curatorial and public service positions at libraries and museums in the United States and the United Kingdom.