Sampling_Methods	OMS collects fleshy fungi, identifies them if possible, keeps a species list in OMS archives. Photography is an integral part of both fungi in the field as well as when displayed for the group. We also submit a species list to the hosting organization. At the conclusion we return the majority of specimens back to the woods.
Description	The Ohio Mushroom Society is a state-wide non-profit organization. Our purpose is to conduct field studies, document species of fungi, and educate both members and public attendees. We are proposing a one day mini-foray in June 2013 where members will traverse certain areas and collect examples of fleshy fungi. These specimens will be identified, species lists composed and discussion (table walk) of any significant finds. Our group is small and the impact to the Field Station and Bath Nature Preserve will be minimal.
