Ohio Division of Wildlife, in coordination with the University of Minnesota and several Midwest states, is conducting a trumpeter swan movement study. We will be capturing and GPS collaring trumpeter swans that are present at Bath Nature Preserve. We will place one GPS transmitter on one adult and one juvenile trumpeter. The objective of this study will be to track their movements year-round, determine whether and where trumpeter swans make molt migrations, evaluate year-round habitat use and selection patterns, and estimate annual survival rates. No impacts are expected to be made to the use of the Field Station and Bath Nature Preserve.
